Phinley Mwampole at Chitabe

Fresh from camp – in the last 24 hours two unforgettable sightings of a leopard successfully hunting an impala and a lion hunting a buffalo.

Photos shared by our guides OD, Ebs and Duke from Wilderness Chitabe

So much action along the Gomoti River. A handsome young male lion in his prime leaps across the river, and a male buffalo, unconcerned about the presence of a crocodile, eventually swam across the river. Mosadinyana, the female leopard, has been seen in the same area for some time now, and the guides suspect her newborn cubs must be around here too.

Nomadic male lions are causing instability within the resident pride, patrolling and roaring in their territory. A lioness from the Mmakgosi Pride of 5 is up in a tree to get a better view of a new pride of 10 in their territory.

A great sighting of a relaxed African wild cat. A giraffe crosses the Gomoti River, unexpectedly finding a deeper section. A wild dog encourages two puppies back into the den just before the pack's departure for a hunt. Note the difference in age between the two pups, from two separate litters.

A very rare daytime sighting of a porcupine, a lion roaring, and a failed hunt of a warthog by a leopard were some of the many highlights at Mombo recently.
