WILDERNESS ZIMBABWE GUIDE

JAMES MUBIRU MUKASA-BATENDE

James Mubiru Mukasa-Batende has over 15 years of tourism experience and a strong background in walking safaris. He is most passionate about sharing Wilderness's conservation mission and connecting guests to the rich biodiversity of Zambia's wild landscapes.

A Wilderness Zambia guide since June 2023, James has an enduring love for nature and conservation, thriving on sharing Africa's wild spaces with guests from around the world. "Sharing my love of nature, engaging with visitors, and the satisfaction of educating others about wildlife are all reasons why I love working with a team that is fighting to protect the environment through sustainable conservation," he says.

Born in the mining town of Ndola in Zambia's Copperbelt Province, James grew up between Ndola and Lusaka. He earned a marketing certificate from Zambia Insurance Business College, followed by a certificate in automotive mechanics from the Livingstone Institute of Business and Engineering Studies. His path to guiding began later, driven by a desire to be closer to nature.

James entered the tourism industry in 2007 with Bushtracks Africa in Livingstone, progressing from a driver to assistant supervisor of the tour guide and mechanics workshop. From 2017 to 2022, he studied wildlife guiding, and went on to hold guiding and management roles with Tusk and Mane Safaris, Kaingu Safari Lodge, and Classic Zambia. During the COVID-19 pandemic, he joined Game Rangers International as a logistical officer, volunteering in Kafue National Park. In 2022, he returned to Classic Zambia to guide at Camp Musekese before joining Wilderness the following year.

In the field, James finds magic in every safari. While each experience is unique, it's the people and the shared moments in nature that he finds most rewarding. "Every safari is distinct in its own right," he reflects, "and just sharing the vast wilderness with different people signifies the start of a new phase in this life journey in which we are all significant participants".

A lover of birds and flight, James says that if he could be any animal for a day, he'd choose the Peregrine Falcon for its speed, freedom, and extraordinary sensory awareness. He's also full of intriguing wildlife insights—like how Wattled Cranes perform a synchronized duet, called a "unison call," to strengthen pair bonds and claim their territory.

Looking ahead, James hopes to continue growing professionally and inspiring the next generation. "I am very passionate about conservation, and I want the next generation to appreciate the beauty we do. If we collaborate, the possibilities are endless".

His advice to first-time safari-goers? Slow down, trust the process, and be present: "Just as a mirror reflects what you project onto it, so too does life. The odds of you catching a butterfly that is flying by are extremely low, but if you remain motionless, there is a good chance the butterfly will come to you".
