Origin & Theory are ideal for social distancing!

With an increase in reservations from people who have been vaccinated, travel is on the rise and we may be on the brink of some normalcy. With some of the most iconic fauna, and pristine untouched natural surroundings, expedition cruising aboard a luxury yacht will be high on the list. It is no wonder people are ready to get to the Galapagos and back to nature, but the question is, how? Newly vaccinated guests will expect robust health protocols onboard and onshore and travel in a safer and more responsible way. In doing so, they'll seek to navigate which companies are doing it right in order to minimize potential negative impacts. See how the Origin & Theory are ideal for social distancing and have a proven track record for operating safe departures since August. <https://www.ecoventura.com/making-the-right-choice-how-to-choose-between-galapagos-yachts/>

- 2) Processing of the salvoconducto or safe passage form (upon receipt of PCR test result)
- 3) Assistance to arrange for a PCR or Antigen test in Galapagos onboard for guests who require a negative test result to return home within 3 days to their country of origin. Ecoventura has made arrangements with VERIS, a certified lab in Ecuador, to perform the tests Friday afternoon on itinerary A and Saturday morning itinerary B. The cost is $125 PCR or $105 Antigen and can be paid in cash or credit card. The test results are available on Sunday afternoon, and guests could depart on a flight on Sunday evening.

Itinerary changes during Covid19 pandemic

GOOD NEWS - Starting this month, we will resume the visit to the highlands and tortoise reserve of Santa Cruz.

None of the Ecoventura yachts are visiting the Darwin Station in Santa Cruz to avoid exposure to populated towns. On Thursday itinerary A and Saturday itinerary B visits to Sombrero Chino or Sullivan Bay are being substituted in place of the Darwin Station visit. Guests will not be able to scuba dive from Puerto Ayora with a local dive shop in Santa Cruz during the cruise until further notice.
